LEADING CHANGE SYMPOSIUM

Australian Technology Park, Sydney
27 and 28 November 2008.

DASSH is pleased to support the symposium and invites its members to respond.

ABOUT THE SYMPOSIUM

The Leading Change Symposium is a major national event hosted by the Australian Learning and Teaching Council (ALTC).

The Leading Change Symposium will bring together discipline-based teaching and learning leaders to identify common priorities to be considered by the ALTC in 2009-2011. At this event, the ALTC will also launch its strategy for supporting the disciplines – the Learning Networks. Learning Networks is a newly formalised focus of activity that arises out of earlier initiatives – the Discipline-Based Initiatives Scheme and the Resource Identification Network.

At the Symposium participants will share their perspectives on priorities for the disciplines. A key outcome of the Symposium will be the identification of common cross-disciplinary priorities that could be addressed through the ALTC's Learning Networks over the next 2 to 3 years.

The Leading Change Symposium program will be available on the symposium website shortly (www.pco.com.au/altcleadingchange/).

There is no registration fee to attend the symposium and the ALTC will cover the cost of participant's travel, accommodation and meals as specified in the Symposium expense inclusions (see Symposium website).

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

The Leading Change Symposium will involve approximately 200 people who have a leadership role within their discipline. These people will most likely be Associate Deans (Teaching and Learning) or those acting in an equivalent leadership role within their discipline.
